

The proposal of requiring radio stations to keep recorded copies of broadcasts marks radio as guilty of the crime before being charged with one. Not to mention the financial hardship it would bring small broadcasters having to buy the equipment necessary to put this proposal into action. I suggest that those stations that have been found guilty of complaints against them should then be put under the microscope of a period of time in which they would have to keep recorded record of broadcasts. You are punishing the thousands of stations and broadcasters that have never had an obscenity complaint against them.
